ILLUSTRATION ON DISCIPLESHIP

There once lived a lioness in the bush, the lioness used to give birth to all kinds of animals including those of its kind. Habitually, each time the lioness knew that the young animals she had given birth to were old enough to separate themselves from her and start fending for themselves, the lioness would roar thunderously.

And since it was impossible for any animal to withstand the roar of the lioness, the young animals though born by the lioness but unlike her, would run away into the forest. But the cubs that were her image and her likeness rather than run away would move closer and lie beneath their mother's belly.

COMMENTS: It is only a true and worthy disciple that will stand firm with his master no matter the condition
