ILLUSTRATION ON BENEVOLENCE

There was a woman who was very kind to people. She had a rich husband. One day a prophet of God went to the woman to seek for help. The woman promptly assisted him. But before the prophet left the woman's house, he asked her to use a piece of chalk and inscribe on the wall of her compound, gate and everything in the house these words: "Whatsoever a man does, let him think about the end"; after this instruction the prophet went away.

Immediately, the woman complied with the prophet's instruction and wrote the inscription: "Whatsoever a man does let him think about the end" everywhere pleading with her husband not to be disturbed by this action.

A night after her visitation by the prophet, armed robbers came to the house. They first of all saw this inscription on the gate and after reading it, they became afraid. They entered the compound and saw this inscription all over the place and on everything. They went further and broke the door, and everything they laid their hands on had the inscription: "Whatsoever a man does, let him think about the end." At this point, the armed robbers frightened, confessed their deeds and took to their heels without picking anything
